Speaker Jürgen Lobert. Sponsored by NESOP.

An introduction to daytime long exposure (DLE) photography. DLE records 1-15 minutes of time by using neutral density filters. This creates unique and intriguing images of the world that we usually freeze in momentary exposures. Letting time pass during exposure converts clouds into bands across the sky, smoothes waters to a mirror finish and can make people and moving objects disappear. The resulting imagery is otherworldly and peaceful.

Infrared photography has a huge following and grows ever more popular each day! While mastering it, things seem difficult, but in fact they are quite simple if you have a good understanding of the technology and choices you must make in both digital and film. Post-processing of the digital infrared image is where most photographers fail, and this is where we will spend a large share of our time.

A time-lapse video essentially compresses time into a smaller space, creating some exceptional and evocative results. In theory, time-lapse videos are easy to create – after all, you simply take a few hundred photos, one after another, line them up in a video application and done. Not true, if you want to create a stunning, seamless, flicker-free time-lapse video; there is more involved than setting up a camera and capturing the sequence: learn equipment, camera settings, intervalometer settings, creating a quick video using Lightroom, creating a video using LRTimelapse.
